the 1990s, the number of people in the United States who are 65 years of age or older has increased by 50% (U.S. Census Bureau, 1997). The number of people aged 65 and older is projected to increase to 20% of the total population by the year 2020 (U.S. Census Bureau, 1997). The increase in the number of people aged 65 and older has led to an increase in the number of people who are dependent on others for their care. This has led to a need for more long-term care facilities, such as nursing homes and assisted living facilities. The number of people in long-term care facilities has increased by 50% since 1980 (U.S. Census Bureau, 1997). The increase in the number of people in long-term care facilities has led to a need for more research on the needs of people in long-term care facilities. This research is needed to help improve the quality of care for people in long-term care facilities.

1. The first part of the report describes the general situation of the country and the main problems which are facing it.

2. The second part of the report describes the results of the survey conducted in the different regions of the country.

The survey was carried out by a team of experts who visited the different regions and collected data on the different aspects of the country's development.

The survey found that the country is facing a number of serious problems, including poverty, unemployment, and lack of access to basic services.

The survey also found that the country's infrastructure is in a state of disrepair, and that the government needs to invest more in education and health care.

The survey concludes that the country needs to implement a series of reforms in order to address these problems and achieve sustainable development.
